Staff Work Week

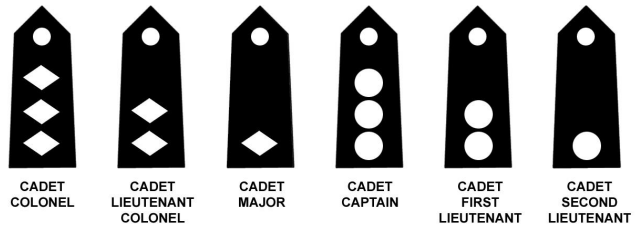

The staff work week is set up to prepare for the coming JROTC year. What happens is the JROTC staff cabinet shows up to collaborate and get everything ready for the coming cadets. The different positions work on their designated areas and collaborate for others.

The S1 is the personnel officer and makes sure the records for all the cadets are in the right order and takes out any cadets that have left the program. He also will make sure all awards are distributed properly. The S2, as the security officer, has to ensure that the supply rooms are locked and closed. The S3 is the training officer and has to create a written schedule of the entire CHCORI Battalion, by gathering information of each class and event. The S4 has to count each and every item in the supply room and keep the inventory up to date. They also have to order any needed awards and uniforms for the next year. The S5 is the public affairs officer and has to prepare the newsletter for the first month of JROTC. They also have to set up the next bulletin board and get pictures of past and current events to show what our cadets have been doing, as well as setting up the scrapbook for current and past years showing pictures and labeling them accordingly.

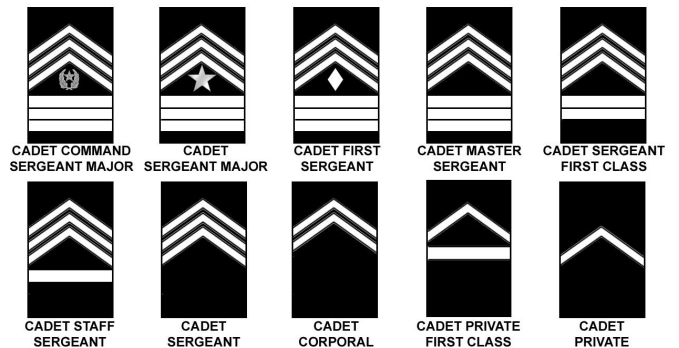

There are others that show up to the staff work week than the staff cabinet. The CHCORI chain of command shows up to help and do their own duties. The battalion commander sets up the PLT lesson for the coming week and makes sure that all of the staff stays on task and is working to the best of their abilities. The executive officer, or XO, is lead by the battalion commander and motivates the staff to work harder and produce better work as a whole. The Captains of each of the companies keeps track of each member of their school in JROTC, makes sure they are attending the JROTC program, and then informs the S1 of their status. The First Sergeants of each company assist in this effort and help the new cadets when they arrive. The Command Sergeant Major is in charge of the Color Guard, but more importantly he is in charge of every NCO (NCOs are the ranks from Corporal to Command Sergeant Major) that is in the battalion as he is the highest ranking noncommissioned officer. All together the staff sets up the year of JROTC quickly and efficiently in a short week of hard work.
